Panda face cake template.

These mutation probabilities also apply to spawned (not bred) pandas for their main and hidden genes. The rarest mob in Bedrock Edition is a baby husk with equipment and armor riding a brown panda, which has a 2.88×10-13 percent (one in 3.472 trillion) chance of spawning. Playful pandas: Roll over and jump around even as adults. To enter love mode, there must be at least eight bamboo blocks within a five-block radius of both pandas. Spawning[] Pandas spawn rarely, in groups of 1-2 in jungle biomes at the surface on grass blocks within a five-block space above them at a light level of 9 or more. Breeding[] The panda is the only animal to have extra breeding conditions. Behavior[] Pandas act similarly to other neutral mobs; they attack when hurt, but only once (similar to biology. There is also a 1/32 chance for each gene of the baby to mutate into another gene. The lazy panda is the slowest land mob in the game (not counting status effects such as Slowness). Mutations have different genes, these probabilities can be found in the table underneath. [edit] Bedrock Edition: See Bedrock Edition level format/Entity format. To get a brown or weak panda, both the main and hidden genes must be both brown or weak. Weak pandas: Tend to sneeze more often as babies than regular baby pandas, and have half the health of other pandas. Gallery[] Screenshots[] Two pandas sitting up, eating bamboo. Therefore, this title screen can be identified as using a Java Edition screenshot. Do not follow a player who is holding bamboo while they're lying on their back. Normal, aggressive, lazy, worried, and playful personalities are dominant traits, and weak and brown personalities are dominant traits, and weak and brown personalities are recessive traits. They are a bit more common in bamboo jungles. A panda lying on its back. Adult pandas seek out bamboo and cake to eat. Once that requirement is met, feeding them bamboo causes them to mate, producing a baby panda, and the panda becomes passive instead of neutral toward that player. Pandas have one private inventory. When two pandas breed, each one passes one of their genes to their children, who then randomly mix both obtained genes as their respective main and hidden genes. Certain aspects of a panda's behavior and appearance vary depending on its personality. Also, if the player feeds two pandas too close, they instead bleat and become hostile toward the player. Baby pandas are personality actions. Report issues there. 5% of pandas spawn as babies. Baby pandas have a 1/6000 chance (0.01666%; for weak baby panda is 1/500 (0.2%) chance) of sneezing every tick, which rarely drops a slime ball and make all adult pandas jump within 10 blocks of the sneezing baby panda. If both the main and hidden genes are dominant, the main gene has priority and presents itself as the panda's personality. Lazy pandas have a smiling face. They also move faster in water than other land mobs (similar to polar bears). A dominant trait always has priority over a recessive genes. Upon successful breeding, 1-7 is dropped. Trivia[] To create the in-game sounds for pandas, Mojang Studios' lead sound designer, Samuel Åberg, went to Guangzhou, China, to record real-life pandas.[2] This was also done with dolphins. Like other baby animals, killing a baby panda yields no items or experience. Pandas spawn with a randomized personality, with the normal one being the most common and the brown variant being the rarest. An aggressive pandas becomes hostile toward the attacker. The panda that sits on the title screen of the Bedrock Edition beta uses the model of the Java Edition panda's sitting pose. Brown pandas: Do not have unique personality actions, but are brown and white instead of the usual black off a cliff or another high altitude. Appearance[] The different variations of pandas - from left to right: brown, lazy, worried, playful, weak, aggressive and normal. A worried panda shaking and hiding its face during a thunderstorm. They also whimper if a thunderstorm is happening in the area. Pandas follow any player who is carrying bamboo and stop following if the player moves beyond approximately 16 blocks away. The brown panda, known as the Qinling panda rolling. The appearance of pandas depends on their personality: Aggressive pandas have angry eyebrows and a tight frown. [JE only] In Bedrock Edition, if a player is holding bamboo, a lazy panda stops lying on its back and starts following that player. Brown pandas have brown and white fur and a frowning face. Weak pandas have teary eyes and snotty noses. Drops[] Upon death, adult pandas drop: Baby pandas have 1/700 chance to drop 1 slimeball after they sneeze.

Because template is an action, and not a function, there is no way to pass the output of a template into the present pipeline where it can be passed along to other functions; the data is simply inserted inline.
